Lighting

Stars descend upon the fort, as the sun sets on the horizon. These twinkling jewels that light up the structure are provided by Decon Lighting, founded in 1972 by Livinder Singh. The company enjoys a turnover of Rs 10 crore and works with 50 dealers across India. It is based in New Delhi and employs 50 people. Its clients include the Lotus Temple, as well as other hotels, heritage sites and museums, such as the Town Hall Museum in Kolkata and National Crafts Museum, New Delhi. Decon also does its green bit by creating energy saving products. The firm is now focusing on lighting solutions that can run on solar and wind energy.
